

END OF THE LINE

Lyrics and Music © 2011 by Bill Roper

The computer's whining madly.
The solution's gone to hide.
"It's all right," she told me sadly
And I know the damned thing lied.
I'm the pilot of this starship
In a universe of pain.
As long as I can keep my grip,
It's here we will remain.

(Chorus twice)

Em E7sus4 Em E7sus4
At the end of the line.
Em E7sus4 Em E7sus4 Em
At the end of the line.

This lovely little chord progression showed up in my guitar's in basket about two weeks ago and said, "You should do something with me!"

Well, yes, I should. Would you mind letting me know what the song is about?

"That's for me to know and for you to find out."

Big help.

I threw words at the chords. They bounced off. I briefly considered using it in the musical, but it didn't really fit. I threw more words at the chords.

And then I realized that the song was a response to "It's All Right". Or as Erica occasionally says in introducing her lovely response, "Half Past Eternity", "No, it's not!"

Yeah, not really. :)
