Remembering

(Chorus) G Am I want to remember Em What I need to forget. C So I'm fanning the ember And keeping it lit. D Am It's been such a long time. Em I should be letting it go. Am It's just another thing in my mind That I don't need to know. I remember sunny mornings, I remember days of rain. I remember streaks of water washing down the window pane. I remember in the evening when the sky was dark and deep. I remember the last night I didn't drink myself to sleep. There were days when I was happy, though not for quite a while. There were days you'd hear me singing and light up with a smile. There were days we were together, there were days we were apart, Until the day you found you had to go and break my heart. (Bridge) E:m Though you are gone, you're always on my mind. It seems the ties between us are still strong enough to bind. And I have no faith in science, nor in magic, nor in prayer, For none of them possess the power to fill your empty chair. (Final chorus) It's just another thing in my mind That I don't need to know.
